“Nathan was my son-in-law. In spite of his pain he was always outgoing and friendly and always willing to lend a hand. We all went out to eat, then proceeded to go outside to take pictures. It was on a hillside and I, with a bad back fell when climbing back up. Nathan selflessly jumped down in front of me to keep me from rolling down the hill. That was just the kind of person he was. I will miss him greatly and loved him.
